BALLOON WENT TEN MILES INTO AIR THIS MORN

Scientist Landed In Italy After Making A New Record

Edolo, Italy, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Prof. Auguste Piccard's second balloon excursion into the stratosphere ended this evening at 5 o'clock when he brought his balloon down here after almost twelve hours in the upper atmosphere.

The gondola bumped to a landing in a field on the outskirts of this little town whose entire population of 2,500 turned out to welcome the adventurers.

There was practically no wind and the balloon came down easily. The bushy-haired little scientist, and his young assistant, Max Cosyn, stepped out of the aluminum sphere smiling broadly.

"Well," said Prof. Piccard, "that was a profitable trip."

But before he would say another word he insisted upon seeing to the deflation of the balloon.

Once he decided to land, he came down gradually and the operation required about two hours.

High above the earth, he knew that the northwest wind probably would carry him out over the Adriatic Sea if he remained up much longer.

Drifting slowly downward, he landed within striking distance of Lake Garda, which he had been able to see from the moment he crossed the Alps and the Swiss frontier.

NEW ALTITUDE RECORD

Dubendorf, Switzerland, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Prof. Auguste Piccard, the conqueror of the stratosphere, established a new world's altitude record today by rising 16,500 meters (more than 10 miles) above the earth in the aluminum air-tight ball attached to his stratosphere balloon.

He took off at the airdrome here at 5:06 o'clock this morning (11:06 P. M., Wednesday, EST) after weeks of waiting for suitable weather conditions and at noon today his headquarters in Zurich received a radio message saying he had smashed his previous altitude mark.

The radio messages sent by Dr. Piccard today were the first ever received from the stratosphere. In his message at noon he said: "We have crossed the Engadine mountains at an altitude of 16,500 meters."

Floated Southward

Advices from various observation posts in this vicinity throughout the forenoon indicated that Dr. Piccard had equalled his previous record shortly after his takeoff. He was sighted frequently from Zurich to Sargans and then the balloon took a more southerly course, toward Italy, and was reported from Davos, St. Moritz and other points.

Another message received shortly after noon reported the professor and his companion, Max A. Cosyn, had crossed the Engadine to the east of Samaden, near St. Moritz.

"We are both well," the message said. "It is very cold and we plan to descend soon. We wish to avoid descending into the Adriatic. We are now in sight of Lake Garda."

40,000 Feet Takeoff

A crowd estimated at 40,000 persons was jammed around the airdrome as the balloon arose, at first slowly and then with increasing rapidity. Excursion trains brought the great crowd in to what it considered a sporting event, something quite different from that it appeared to the hero himself, whose mind was all on the scientific results.

After breakfast and just before he was ready to step into the gondola, he saluted the crowd and then delivered a short radio address, which was broadcast to the United States.

He expected to stay in the air from five to ten hours he said, but he took oxygen enough for thirty hours.

UNKNOWN MAN MET DEATH IN AMBOY TODAY

Beheaded By Freight Train In Illinois Central Yards

(Telegraph Special Service)

Amboy, Aug. 18.—The body of an unknown transient, who is believed to have missed his hold while attempting to board a south bound Illinois Central freight train, was discovered this morning about 8:30 o'clock by a woman who was picking up coal along the tracks. The body was decapitated and was lying by the rails when found. It was removed to the Vaughan mortuary where efforts at identification are being made. Coroner F. M. Banker of Franklin Grove will conduct an inquest this afternoon.

It was believed that the stranger who appears to be past 60 years of age, attempted to board a moving freight train which was leaving the south yards and lost his hold, falling between the cars, his head being severed from the body. The victim wore a full beard and appeared to be a transient who was attempting to steal a ride on the outgoing freight train. No identification could be found when his clothing was searched.

ANOTHER COURT ORDER GRANTED IN WALKER CASE

Neither Will Delay Ruling By Roosevelt, Attorney Declares

(Telegraph Special Service)

Executive Chamber, Albany, N. Y., Aug. 18.—(AP)—While John J. Curtin, chief counsel to Mayor Walker, argued before Governor Roosevelt today for the dismissal of ouster charges, co-counsel obtained from a Kingston Supreme Court justice an order restraining Roosevelt from passing upon the Mayor's fitness until after the court has heard arguments on the legality of the proceedings.

Neither the order issued today nor a previous one obtained by George Donnelly, Secretary of the Bronx Chamber of Commerce, will hold up the removal hearing, the Governor's legal counsel explained.

John J. Bennett, Jr., Attorney General, will appear before Supreme Court Justice Ellis J. Staley tomorrow as "a friend of the court" and not as Roosevelt's representative.

Both the Walker order and the Donnelly order come before Justice Staley at a special term of the Supreme Court tomorrow.

Curtin throughout the hearing has contended that Roosevelt is sitting as a judicial officer; that the proceedings are judicial, and that Walker should be given the right to face his accusers and cross-examine them. Curtin argued that the Governor should call the witnesses who appeared before the Hofstadter legislative committee. Roosevelt yesterday granted Curtin the right to subpoena all of the hundreds of witnesses who testified before the legislative body.

Executive Chamber, Albany, N. Y., Aug. 18.—(AP)—On the sidelines while his counsel, John J. Curtin, argued for the dismissal of ouster charges, Mayor Walker finally broke into today's proceedings with a witticism that provoked a laugh from Roosevelt. Walker for five days had held the stage as he underwent a severe questioning by Roosevelt.

Referring to the allegation that a friend of the Mayor, State Senator John A. Hastings, was interested in bus legislation in New York, Curtin was interrupted by a low-voiced suggestion from Walker.

"I am speaking extemporaneously," Curtin said, "and I welcome assistance from my client."

"Just a back-seat driver, Your Excellency," the Mayor cut in. The Governor joined in the laugh that greeted the sally.

Curtin, taking up each of the 15 charges against the Mayor, contended the evidence, prepared by Samuel Seabury, and the information brought out by Roosevelt's questioning did not justify Walker's removal.

The Governor withheld his decision on Curtin arguments until he had covered all of the allegations.

After a session interrupted by sharp clashes, Roosevelt finished his quizzing of the Mayor yesterday. Once Walker's attorney accused the Governor of taking sides against the Mayor.

Roosevelt granted Walker the right to call on any of the several hundred witnesses who appeared in connection with his case before the Hofstadter legislative investigating committee. The Mayor's counsel said outside the hearing he would call some of them. He was expected to produce today the first of a dozen witnesses, whose identity was kept secret.

During a discussion of the witnesses, Curtin mentioned "the other side."

"There are no sides in this case," said the Governor.

"I have one side," was Curtin's retort. "And Judge Seabury had the other until I came up here. Your Excellency seems to have the other."

Roosevelt "Fed Up"

During the afternoon the Governor announced he was getting "a little fed up" with Curtin's long arguments, motioned to him to sit down, and said, "don't talk any more."

The Governor finished his questioning of Walker with a prolonged discussion of the ethics of fee-splitting by his brother, Dr. William H. Walker, and doctors handling city cases.

Walker said he had been told by his brother that there was a business arrangement between his brother and the other doctors, and that he did not believe fee-splitting was wrong. He said he had investigated and found that the department with which those doctors were connected was one of the most efficiently run in the city government.

"After all," he said "those doctors aren't guilty of any crime. They haven't stolen any money from the city."

New Terrorism In Cleaning Industry

Chicago, Aug. 18.—(AP)—A renewed outbreak of terrorism in the cleaning and dyeing industry was feared today by police who were investigating the bombing of three out-price cleaning establishments.

The shops, two of them belonging to the same firm, were bombed late last night. Owners said they had received warnings to raise their prices. One of the establishments was badly damaged, the loss being estimated at $5,000. At the other two the damage was minor, consisting largely of broken glass and fallen plaster.

Walter Narowski, a watchman at one of the plants, was injured when a bomb was thrown into the building. He was stunned by the explosion.

"BATTLE OF THE HIGHWAYS" EXTENDED TO THREE FRONTS: SIOUX CITY, IOWA, HEMMED IN

Sioux City, Ia., Aug. 18.—(AP)—The "Battle of the Highways," resulting from strikes by farmers for higher prices, was being fought on three fronts today—Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota.

Extending their blockade of Iowa and South Dakota highways into Dakota county, Nebraska, picketing farmers, who say they are determined to withhold produce from the market until prices go higher, hemmed in Sioux City, on all sides, and the situation appeared serious enough to Sheriff Hugh Slocum at Stevens, S. D., to appeal to the State Sheriff for help.

Sheriff Slocum decided to make his appeal after a group of about 100 farmers, picketing a highway at Stevens forced him and his deputies to stop escorting a fleet of five trucks to Sioux City.

The decision of Nebraska farmers to join Iowa and South Dakota producers in the blockade of the highways, which has been under way since last Monday, was announced last night by J. F. Kriege of Dakota City who said that pickets had been given orders to stop all trucks en route to market.

ACTIVITY WAS MARKED TODAY IN ALL STORES

Clerks Preparing For Two Biggest Days In City History

In every retail store in Dixon today there was noticeable activity on the part of proprietors and clerks who are getting ready for what all believe will be the biggest two days in Dixon's mercantile history—the fall Dollar Days, tomorrow and Saturday.

Prices on every article in every store are being cut, some right down to cost figures, others below; for the Dixon business men determined in making their plans for the double bargain day, to outdo themselves, and everyone in the Dixon trading area knows that Dixon Dollar Days are REAL opportunities to purchase quality goods at lowest prices.

Last evening's issue of the Telegraph, carrying a very few of the many bargains to be obtained in Dixon stores tomorrow and Saturday, went into 10,000 homes in Dixon's trade territory—and that means that thousands of out-of-town buyers will be here during the bargain carnival, in addition to everyone in the immediate vicinity, to make their dollars go farther than ever before.

SEN. DAVIS IS INDICTED ON A FEDERAL CHARGE

He And Six Others Are Accused Of Participating In Lottery

New York, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Seven individuals, including U. S. Senator James J. Davis of Pennsylvania, were indicted today charged with participation in a lottery and conspiracy.

The others indicted are Bernard C. McGuire, head of the B. C. McGuire Merchandise Company of New York; Theodore G. Miller, head of the Mooseheart Navigation Department; Raymond Walsh, an employee of McGuire, Conrad H. Mann, Kansas City; Frank E. Herling, publisher of the Eagle's Magazine; and M. J. Rivise, in charge of the package delivery department of the Western Union Telegraph Company.

The charges against the defendants were contained in four indictments handed down by the Federal grand jury.

The Western Union Telegraph Company is also named as a defendant.

Probed Fraternities

The indictments grew out of an investigation of fraternal organization activities involving the Eagle, the Moose, and the Shrine among others, concerning the sale of lottery tickets which drew prizes for holders of lucky numbers.

The lotteries were ostensibly held for the benefit of unfortunate members of the fraternal orders and needy dependents of members.

About 50,000,000 tickets are alleged to have been issued for sale at 50 cents and a dollar apiece in connection with cards of admission to receptions and dances and distributions to the needy.

Approximately $500,000 was rumored to be involved but United States Attorney George Z. Medalle refused to comment on the figures "in advance of trial."

Began Months Ago

The Federal investigation began several months ago. Senator Davis Mann and McGuire were all subpoenaed and were questioned by the grand jury.

Sen. James H. Price of Virginia, Imperial Recorder of the Shrine, was also subpoenaed but advised the investigators he had no part in the distribution of the tickets.

Medalle said he expected the defendants to present themselves for pleading within the next few days. Senator Davis is a high executive of the Moose.

Mann is a national executive of the Eagles.

Miller, whose address is Mooseheart, Ill., has been active in the campaign.

McCORMICKS IN REUNION TODAY NEAR DEATH BED

Recovery Of Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick Impossible

Chicago, Aug. 18.—(AP)—Her recovery reported to be impossible Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick was reunited with her former husband and her three children today for the first time in a decade.

Physicians announced her conditions was "very grave," that she had become suddenly and seriously worse, more so than at any time during her illness of the past month.

The arrival of Mrs. Max Oser from Switzerland completed the family circle for the first time since Mrs. McCormick obtained a divorce from Harold F. McCormick, President of the International Harvester Company, in 1921. Her daughter Muriel became estranged from her mother by that decree and went to live with her father, later leaving him after his marriage to Mme. Ganna Walska.

But Muriel, now Mrs. Elsha Dyer Hubbard, was at her mother's side today, as well as Mr. McCormick, who has remained friendly to his former wife, especially since his divorce from Mme. Walska. So was Fowler McCormick, who like his sisters married without his mother's consent but stood reunited with them as all despaired of her life.

Father, Brother Absent

Only Mrs. McCormick's father, John D. Rockefeller, her brother, John D. Jr., and her sister, Mrs. E. Parmelee Prentice, all of New York, were absent.

Mrs. McCormick was 59 last August 31. She was born in Cleveland, the youngest daughter of the oil promoter, and married McCormick, heir to the millions created by the inventor of the reaper, in 1895, uniting two of America's largest fortunes.

She succeeded Mrs. Potter Palmer as the leader of Chicago society from her stone mansion at 1600 Lake Shore Drive. She was the original sponsor of the Chicago Civic Opera Company. Fowler Muriel and Mathilde were born to her, as well as another son who died of scarlet fever. His death contributed to her nervous breakdown in 1913 and she and Mr. McCormick went to Switzerland and Italy.

Became Estranged

Mrs. McCormick became an avid student of psychoanalysis. She also became acquainted with a young Swiss architect, Edwin D. Krenn, who returned to this country with her. McCormick came on another boat and the couple were estranged. Mrs. McCormick obtained a divorce in 1921 on grounds of desertion. Hints of her impending marriage to Krenn never were verified, but he became her constant social escort and business advisor. She reestablished her leadership of society upon her return and was active until last year, when she never served liquor in her home and advocated prohibition until a few months ago. Her renouncement of the policy followed that of her brother.

CURTIS ACCEPTS NOMINATION IN TOPEKA TODAY

Vice President Is Given Welcome By Friends Of Both Parties

Topeka, Kas., Aug. 18.—(AP)—Vice President Charles Curtis reached today the starting point of his 1932 campaign for re-election—formal notification the Republican party had for the second time chosen him as President Hoover's co-standard bearer.

In a simple ceremony shorn of customary frills at his expressed wish, he received formal notice of his re-nomination after which he was prepared to propound his view on prohibition, the economic situation, the farm problem and other issues of the campaign.

Party leaders from throughout the country as well as many of his Kansas constituents during the 35 years he represented them in Congress assembled here for the ceremony, opening at 3 P. M. (C. S. T.) on the north steps of the state Capitol.

There, in a brief address, he received word of his re-nomination from Sen. L. J. Dickinson of Iowa, keynote at the Republican National convention Everett Sanders, Republican National Chairman presided.

Dickinson's Tribute

Senator Dickinson paid tribute to the Vice President as fitted for the post in view of the "splendid dedication of his life to public service."

After briefly reviewing the problems faced by the executive and legislative branches of the government, he declared "economic chaos of the day," Dickinson declared the delegates to the Republican convention "with due regard for the variance in views as to party principles, all were of one mind on the personnel of our ticket for the campaign of 1932."

He praised the Vice-President as one "fixed in the fundamentals of government, one who knows the interests of our people of this valley, one who has an abiding faith in our open spaces," and who has a firm grasp of our national situation.

Nomination Natural

"It is natural," he continued, after citing Curtis' long record in the House of Representatives, the Senate and the Vice-President's chair, "in view of this splendid dedication of his life to public service, that he should be re-nominated as the Republican candidate for Vice President in the campaign of 1932."

Touching on the problems facing the country today the Iowa Senator declared a balance between industry and agriculture was the paramount factor in defense against depression.

"Probably the greatest factor in our economic advancement is the fact that our farmers and factory workers are working together."

"Petrified Bodies" Stir Dispute

Announcement of the discovery of the "petrified bodies" of a mother and child at Indian Springs, Ga., is viewed with skepticism by archaeolo-gists. Here are the stone-like figures, with L. J. Gregory who unearthed them on his farm. The theory was advanced that the mother and child belonged to the Toltec tribe, said to have inhabited Georgia more than 1000 years ago—before the Indians made their appearance there.

Mrs. Walter Mahl and son Raymond of West Grove, Pa., are here for a visit at the home of the former's cousin, Supervisor D. H.
Spencer and family.

The wage agreement declared in effect one week ago.

Planes Flew Over Six planes carrying officers of the Illinois National Guard reconnoitering the situation flew over the county about 7 o'clock but did not land there. They returned to Springfield to Governor
Louis L. Emmerson who ordered the reconnaissance.

Trouble developed shortly after dawn at Toronto, five miles south of Springfield. About 150 dissenting miners climbed aboard a train of empty coal cars, uncoupled them and broke up the train at Gilmarm, a few miles further south. The cars were enroute to Christian county to take out coal mined under the new agreement.

Three of the four mines of the Peabody Coal Company, largest producers in Christian county, were functioning today. The fourth, at Tovey, was closed when 1100 miners voted to strike at the insistence of non-working union men. It is nine miles from Taylorville. Trouble was feared in that area if the company attempted to operate the shaft with other men.

Situation Aggravated Yesterday's spilling of blood, officials said, aggravated an already tense situation. Joe Colbert, secretary of a local in Franklin county and an active opponent of the new wage pact, was killed by three men who drove to his home, called him to their car, and then felled him with a shot gun charge.

Mrs. Clyde E. Moses, wife of a miner, suffered slight injuries from shot when, according to officials, her husband failed to stop his automobile at a barricade near the Christian county line. Moses was jailed on charges of resisting officers.

Another coal belt county—Perry-was recruiting an army of "home guards" today to protect its union miners from protesters of the new wage scale. Groups of invading miners were unsuccessful today in persuading union diggers to quit Pe county pits.

The strikers are demanding that the $5 daily wage scale, agreed to by their officials, be abrogated and are seeking to have other diggers, willing to work at the reduced scale, stay away from the collieries.

BARRICADES DOWN
Taylorville, Ill., Aug. 18—(AP)—
Christian county officials today removed barricades and Deputy Sheriffs which had blocked all the roads leading into the county.
Their action cleared the way for entrance of dissatisfied union miners, who had threatened to march upon the mines from Springfield.

Sheriff Charles Weineke, who barred the road last week in order to prevent interference with miners who wished to work at the new lower scale, told his deputies about 7 A. M. to stand aside and return to their homes in readiness for instant duty if trouble developed.

He indicated he would arrest any trouble makers but probably not unless it actually occurred at the mines. Union pickets in other counties had persuaded some of their fellow members to desert their picks and drills in protest to

TODAY

TRITE old adage, yet still as true.

For counsel as when the thought was new.

A little rhyme with a short refrain

That sings its wisdom over again.

With clearness that brooks of no delay.

Is sweetly urging, "Be glad today."

Persuasively rousing to near delight

Revealing pleasure deemed out of sight!

It bans our protests, ignores our fears

Persistently urging smiles for tears

It gayly chases dull care away

With gentle advice, "Be glad today"

The world's consoler has never said,

"Tomorrow give us our daily bread"

With love's bright visions he wisely taught—

Tomorrow's need claim no anxious thought.

Today holds all that Love has planned;

Unfearing, blithe, meet its demand:

"Be Glad Today."

—Florence E. Buck.

Mrs. Hurst, Daughter Arrived Safely

Mrs. J. H. Hurst and daughter Dorothy, who has been visiting at the home of Dr. and Mrs. S. W. Lehman in Buff Park, a few days ago, have arrived safely at their home in Angleton, Texas.

They encountered trouble between Houston and Angleton in the recent severe storm and their train stood on a siding for the greater part of the night. Mr. Hurst and daughter Bernice Margaret, also suffered from the effects of the storm, and with many others, left their home for the night, seeking greater safety in the open, lying flat on the ground during the great windstorm of hurricane velocity. The wind blew windows in on the eastern side of their home, demolished smaller buildings on the ground and worked havoc generally.

Dixon friends are happy to hear, however, that the Hurst family is reunited and safe. The storm caused much loss in various cities in Texas and along the coast.

Miss Dorothy Hurst has been making her home with Dr. and Mrs. Lehman for a year or more and her mother, Mrs. J. H. Hurst, came north for a visit and to accompany her daughter to her home. Mrs. Hurst and Mrs. Lehman are sisters.

Melons Appear In Many New Varieties

Not so many years ago muskmelons and watermelons were the only melons commonly known and marketed throughout the country but with modern shipping facilities making it possible to send fruit to the "far corners of the map," the householder finds she must know her melons when she goes to the market. No fruit is harder to select because there is such a big variety of them and they all have their peculiar characteristics.

Regardless of variety, all melons must have heat before they can reach maturity, so the weather conditions throughout the country have much to do with their quality. Melons must be ripe and they must mature on the vine. They may ripen after picking without harming the flavor providing full growth is allowed before harvesting.

The time-honored practice of thumping watermelons with the fingers is a reliable test. A full grown ripe melon has a dull, muffled sound when thumped, while a green melon rings with a metallic sharpness. In other words the ripe melon says "plunk" and the green one says "plink."

The color of the underside also should be noticed. Pale yellow, lemon or warm ivory colors with a sort of warty roughness indicate ripeness. A warm yellowish green rather than a bright clear green on the top is desirable. There is a thin, film-like covering all over the surface of a watermelon. When the melon is ripe this covering will peel off like dry wax if the thumb nail is drawn across it.

Avoid Mis-shapen Melons

Round or long melons are good, but those which are mis-shapen should be avoided. Large melons are more desirable than small ones, but a heavy small one is preferable to a light-weight large one.

The color of the seeds in water melons has little to do with the maturity of a melon since the seeds naturally range from white to brown and black.

Over-ripe melons are as undesirable as immature ones, but they can usually be detected by softness when the melon is pressed with the thumb, and by the dull appearance of the rind. In water-melons many yellow veins through the green surface is an indication of over-ripeness.

Most persons know the sweet refreshing flavor of the honeydew melon. Its crisp watery texture and its attractive color, shading from a clear tender green to almost white, make it particularly inviting for hot summer days. They are served at almost any meal of the day—icy cold as a breakfast fruit or light dessert.

cut in cubes and chilled in a tart fruit juice as an appetizer, or combined with sections of orange and slices of pineapple they make a perfect summer dinner salad. When shopping for these melons

Youthful Lapin Jacket Hints Of Cooler Days to Come

BY JOAN SAVOY
NEA Service Writer

There is a coolness in the breeze at evening, now and then, that hints at the coming of autumn. If you are going to take an ocean voyage, if the Canadian woods are calling for a belated vacation . . . or if you just want to be ready for football weather, or are thinking of your first appearance on the campus, it is wise to have one costume that is in harmony with autumn.

This lapin jacket, which ties at the neck, in a youthful, debonair fashion, follows the new neckline that hugs the throat. The ends of the scarf are knotted carelessly but the weight of the fur makes one select those of an evenly colored creamy white or pale green and red and a pleasantly fragrant aroma.

Varieties Are Many

The honeyball melon, which made its debut a few years ago is very much like the honeydew. It has a sweeter flavor and is of a more melting texture, but is used and served the same as the honeydew.

In shape it is perfectly round. Its rind is an evenly colored pale yellow and is closely netted. The same pleasing fragrance indicates a good melon.

The casaba melon has a deeply furrowed, very hard rind. It has a thick meat, not quite so sweet and less watery than the honey melons. Its color is of deep cream to golden and its texture is very smooth and firm.

Persian melons are natives of the west and are rich and flavorful. Their color is vivid, of a rich salmon pink. While they are deliciously juicy they are not as watery and their texture is firm and crisp. The rind is netted much like the cantaloup but the shape of the melon itself is flat at the ends rather than pointed as most cantaloups are.

Melons are ideal warm weather fare because their water content makes them cooling and delightful. They are so easy to serve that they are a boon to the cook and if used in variety they don't become monotonous.

Sprigs of mint, sections of lemon, orange and lime are often used with honeydew, honeyball and casaba melons to emphasize their delicacy of flavor.

Never serve ice over a cut melon. Chill the fruit thoroughly before cutting and serve on a bed of ice if you will, but when ice is put over the surface of a melon the delicate flavor is decidedly injured.

Junior Needs More Water on Hot Days

Please do not forget to give the baby a drink of water.

Of course he gets water in many forms. Milk formulas are composed of so many ounces of water according to his age. Also his cereal and vegetables are boiled in it and his fruit juices diluted with it, either stewed or fresh. But this is no tough. Every human being, young and old, craves a good straight drink of cool, fresh water every little while. When such craving sets up there is a real bodily need for it, you may be sure.

Tiny babies nursing or on the straight diet do not seem to suffer from thirst, have to be coaxed sometimes to drink plain water out of a bottle. Whether they seem to and go up and the other go down, as the designer intended.

The jacket is worn with a wine red wool crepe frock that features a built-up skirt, and a wine red suede belt and hat. The hat depends on the tilt of the beret and a row of buttons for its effect. Suede slippers, of the same shade, will keep the whole costume in harmony.

The coat is just as effective when worn with a green ensemble. It doesn't lose any charm when brown or beige are chosen. But the wine red is so suggestive of woodland walks, bonfires, and other autumnal notes that it is especially attractive.

up the doctor. "Try her with water," he suggested.

She had no hope, but got the water. In the next few hours the baby consumed six or eight ounces and stopped fretting after the first good drink. It would be hard to say why she became so thirsty all of a sudden. But she did. She developed into a great water drinker and began to gain steadily in weight.

Older babies on varied diets—cereals, vegetables, fruit juices, custards and perhaps eggs, that contain thirst-producing substances—sugar and salt—cannot help but be thirsty.

After they have had a meal give them a little drink of water. The big drinks should be between the meals. Do not allow them to get into the habit of drinking just before they eat, if you can avoid it.

Some doctors do not recommend drinking after a meal either. But I do not think that it matters if the stomach is not flooded by large drafts that dilute digestive juices.

The great part of water should be taken between meals, however.

In summer we need to take more fluid because we lose more through the pores by perspiration. Tissues take up the water all over the body very quickly. In fact water constitutes by far the greater part of our body's weight, being not only contained in our blood and other fluids but in the muscles, organs, and even in the bones themselves.

So please do not forget on these hot days to give the baby plenty of water. Iced water should never be given. If you are not quite sure of your water supply, boil it for all the children.

OUTLAWING CONQUESTS.

Secretary Stimson's recent declaration that America would abide by the policy of refusing to recognize territorial or economic gains which any nation may make by force of arms represents a change in international relations far greater than is generally realized.

This policy, affirmed last winter, adopted by the League of Nations and repeated not long ago by the nations of South America in connection with the row between Bolivia and Paraguay, can be made an extremely effective force for world peace—if the nations of the world give it more than lip service.

And when you stop to consider it carefully, you will see that it signifies one of the profoundest shifts in the conduct of world affairs ever attempted.

What it does is to outlaw the right of conquest—a right as old as civilization.

Never before has the world even tried to commit itself to the doctrine that force is not, after all, the final arbiter in international relations.

To understand how far-reaching this policy is, just imagine how different a place the world would be if this policy had been in effect a few generations earlier.

Texas, California, New Mexico and Arizona would not be part of the United States. The American flag would not fly over the Philippines or Puerto Rico.

North of the international border, Canada would be existing under the flag of France. In the orient there would be no "treaty ports," no foreign colonies; the Dutch would not hold the islands of the East Indies, the English would not hold India, the map of Africa would look entirely different.

But there is no point in going on, because we simply cannot picture the world as it would be if the right of conquest had been outlawed a few centuries ago. In attempting to outlaw it now we are trying something earlier generations never even dreamed of trying.

HATS OFF TO GRAND RAPIDS.

Among American cities, Grand Rapids, Mich., seems to have a distinction for which every large city in the land can envy her.

Grand Rapids has had only two traffic fatalities since the first of the year. For the last six months Grand Rapids has not had any at all. The city held a parade to commemorate the fact recently—and small wonder! In an era when autos kill 30,000 Americans annually, a city which finds a way of keeping its streets free from deaths for six months has something to crow over.

Indeed, a record of that kind might well be the proudest boast a city could make. "Move to our town and be sure your children will be safe" ought to be a potent sort of slogan. Let's hope the Grand Rapids idea spreads far and wide.

SNOW AT 9000 FEET.

Those aviators who make daily high-altitude flights to get the dope on the weather seem to have some odd expediences now and then.

Ralph Wenzinger, who makes such flights for the Weather Bureau at Cleveland, had one of them not long ago. He went to an altitude of 9000 feet on a hot summer day—and ran into the heaviest snowstorm he had seen in more than a year!

On the ground everything was summery, and not a flake got down to where earthbound mortals could see it. But Wenzinger, a mile and a half off the ground, was fighting a January blizzard, and he had to go up to 16,000 feet before he could get out into summer weather again.

The moral of all of this seems to be that if you have an airplane you needn't worry about hot weather. You can find your own snow just by going up far enough.

SHRAPNEL FROM ANTIETAM.

One of the oddest of recent news stories, surely, was the one which told how doctors removed two pieces of shrapnel the other day from the nose of Alexander Kile, 98-year-old Civil War veteran.

Kile, who lives in Oregon, got those two mementoes of his army days during the battle of Antietam, which happened more than 60 years ago. Apparently he had carried them about with him all this time without being greatly troubled by them. It was not until just recently, when he went to a doctor because his nose felt funny, that he bits of metal were discovered.

Surely, the aged veteran must just about hold the world's record for a deferred operation on a battle wound!

It occurs to me that present-day pickpockets are becoming clumsy. Fifteen or 20 years ago . . . they were so clever they could pick a pocket without the victim becoming aware of it until he reached for his wallet. Now, it's mere bungling.—Municipal Judge Frank S. Day of Cleveland.

CO. A WINNING RECOGNITION IN
129th INFANTRYRanks Among The Best Units In Camp At
Camp Grant(Telegraph Special Service)
Camp Grant — Our company is at last being recognized as one of the best, if not the best, in the 129th infantry. By best, is meant, first in effectiveness, appearance and cleanliness.

Our Friday our combat squad ranked second in the regiment. Saturday morning the company ranked first in the regiment on field inspection. Field inspection is an inspection of all equipment used by an army in the field, such as pup tents, mess kits, raincoats, rifles, blankets and wearing apparel. There are 17 companies in the 129th infantry.

In the Governor's Day parade, the first battalion of the 129th infantry was described by spectators as the best looking unit on the field. Our company occupied the flank of the first battalion. We were the company nearest the spectators so in praising the first battalion they were indirectly praising Company A.

Sunday a great many parents, wives, relatives and friends of the members of our company visited the camp. Our visitors included George Platten of Dixon who was recently awarded the Order of the Purple Heart.

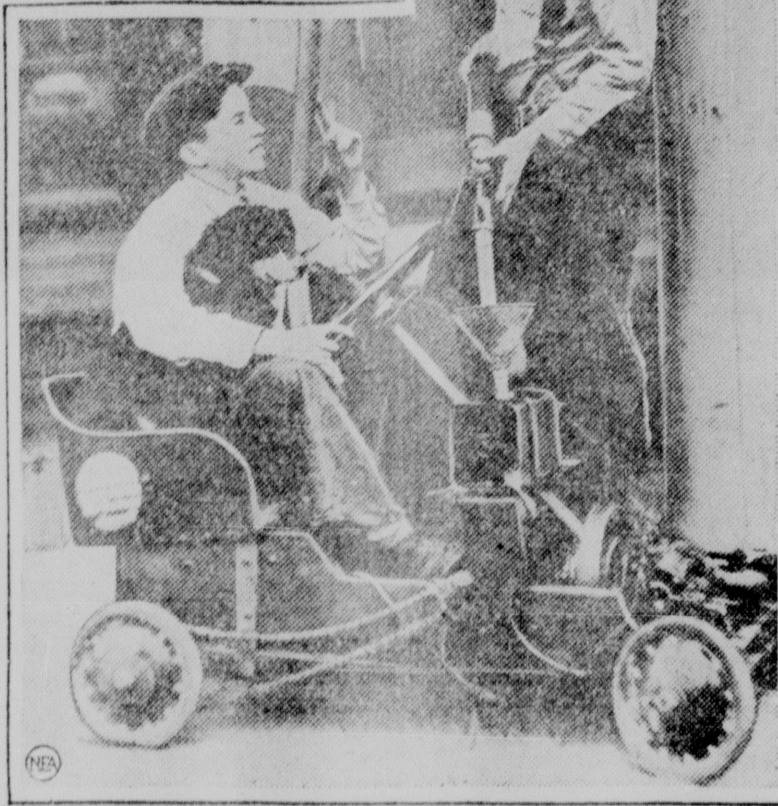

Monday morning the whole camp was divided into two armies the Red and Blue. Company A was in the Blue army. The Blue army was put on the offensive and the Red army on the defensive. A hectic battle waged for a few hours. A great deal of blank ammunition and energy was used in the battle. The casualties were fairly numerous but not very serious. Blisters and calouses on the feet from walking, scratches and cuts from thorns and barbed wire, and cramps from drinking too much water were the main types of injuries. The judges, referees and officials are still arguing about who won the "war."

A great many wives and mothers would derive a great deal of satisfaction from observing the husbands and sons washing their own clothes. Every day each one of the soldiers washes some of our clothes and hangs them on a tent rope to dry.

Harry Dockey holds the record in trips to Dixon. He hasn't missed a night yet that has been re-

A Gallon, and Fill 'Er Up

An old washing machine for motive power, a gallon tin can for gas tank and a little wheel after school made Stanley McCrary of Seattle, Wash., the above "speed wagon" that makes 12 miles an hour and runs indefinitely on a gallon of gasoline. Stanley is shown above in his father's service station getting corded. There appears to be an irresistible magnet drawing him away from camp each evening.

Corporal Mosholder's squad were quite surprised and a great deal peevish the other night when without warning their tent collapsed. It seems some one had tied a rope to the base of the tent pole and at an opportune moment jerked it out.

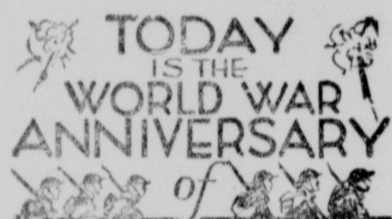

The man in charge of each tent has his name printed on the floor of the tent near the door. Some way or another, Sergt. Ramsey's name was printed "Sergt. Pansey" and there is a great deal of argument now about which is correct, Pansey or Ramsey.

That "Doc" Camery and Bieschke have a very generous disposition when in the right mood was shown the other night when Camery gave away his "O. D." cap and Bieschke his sharpshooter's medal. The two were touring together at the time.

POETS' CORNER

A TRIBUTE

All the house is sad today
For dear old Sheff has passed away;
He, who was blithe of heart and home
Slumbers now in a new grave.
Oh, the bitter tears we've shed
Over the news that Sheff is dead!Just a friend! Well maybe so.
To the folks who come and go
But to Amber and to me,
He was friendly company;
Honest, faithful, tender, too!
More so than most men we know.Sheff who had the sort of mind
Unto friendship inclined;
Watched for children day by day
Coming home from school to play;
Knew the time, and o'er and o'er
Stood to greet them at the door.Say it's foolish, if you will,
We are grieving for him still.
Say that friends who dwell apart
Should not crawl into your heart
So their death can sadden you—
But the trouble is they do.

BRITISH PUSH FORWARD

On Aug. 4, 1918 British forces in the Lys salient pushed forward on a five-mile front near Bailleul, storming Outtersteene just before midnight.

American troops in Lorraine continued their advance in the vicinity of Frapelle, which they had taken the day before.

German general orders taken from officers captured in the days fighting told of plans for the German army to retire to positions many miles back of the lines then held.

German losses in the five spring and summer offensives and the constant battering of the rapidly increasing allied armies had reduced German manpower to the lowest point since the beginning of the war.

WEEKLY SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By WILLIAM GILROY D. D.

One cannot read the story of Moses and of his prophetic influence upon and leadership of Israel without realizing the profound place that the sense of holiness and the practice of worship had in his life and in his guidance of the people.

The history of our cathedrals and churches traces back to the tent, or tabernacle, in the wilderness. This tent, or tabernacle, was the symbol of the presence of the Divine. It was a tent because it must move with those who were moving, and if the fact that it was outside of the camp seems to suggest a sort of false symbolism in the aloofness of the place of worship from daily life, we must remember that just the opposite was the case as the people in their situation had no abiding place.

They were moving to a promised land, and the place of the tent, or tabernacle, outside of the camp suggested that their highest interests were in this movement forward. When the people became established in the promised land, they built a permanent house of worship and it became the center and symbol of their whole life.

And this is the symbolism of the church today. Churches are not, and ought not to be, outside of the realm of our daily lives, and yet in a sense they represent some thing above these daily lives or beyond these daily lives, toward which we are striving in faith.

If we were to complete the symbolism, we should find it in a picture in the Book of Revelations of the City of God in which there was no temple, but in which the city itself had become the temple and in which men and all their activities and interests were living their worship.

We are here in the world as pilgrims. Neither in our personal lives have we attained the ideal nor have we attained that ideal society in which the will of God is fully performed. As long as this is true the symbolism of the tabernacle will apply to our churches as a whole.

One of the facts upon which we should lay great stress in this lesson is the reality of communion with the Divine. We are apt in the reading of all such passages as this to give materialistic interpretation to the expressions, which is not necessary, and which is perhaps foreign to oriental imagery. But the fact remains that deeply rooted in the life of Moses himself was his personal communion with the Divine.

He was living in the conscious belief that he had been called by the Most High to perform a great service—a service from which, in fact, he had shrunk—feeling his own weakness and inadequacy, but in which once he had fully accepted the presence of the Most High was with him as his strength and his support. The experience that he had found himself, he believed was possible for the whole people.

It was a great ideal, and one that we cannot contemplate too deeply or too seriously—this idea of a nation subject to the will of God, led by the Divine Spirit, and progressing in the realization of Divine plans.

We may think that we have advanced far beyond the primitive religion of Moses and those of his day, but the great elemental factors or religion are found here.

Our conceptions of God may enlarge, but the method of approach to God and the reality of devotion to Him in worship and service do not change. They become only larger and effective as the vision of the Divine Grace deepens in reality.

A ROUGH MATE

Calgary, Alta., Canada—Edward Stratton may have been an affectionate husband at times, but in his fits of cholera he was not an ideal playmate for any one. As least so his wife claims, during Stratton's trial for wife-beating. Not content with beating her with a four-foot strap, and threatening her life, she alleged, he tied her in the family car and tried to push the machine over a 300-foot cliff. She managed to swerve the car in time.

workers have been able to sell each other nearly all they have produced," he said. "Our employment for tomorrow depends more on the domestic market than on any other economic factor. Markets for food products and prosperity on the farms can best be found in wages for the unemployed and work for the idle."

Curtis' Acceptance

The text of vice President Curtis' address in accepting nomination:

Mr. Chairman, Senator Dickinson, members of the nomination committee, friends and neighbors:

It gives me pleasure to add a word of welcome to these distinguished guests in the city of my birth. Let me say to you, ladies and gentlemen, that this vast assemblage of my fellow citizens is gathered without regard to party to show its good will to a life-long neighbor, and to recognize a com-piment paid him by your presence in this city today. Dull would I be in feeling and lacking in taste, did I fail to sense this and to express gratitude for this generous manifestation of friendship. I thank you all for your presence and your esteem, which I shall ever prize and ever strive to merit.

Ladies and gentlemen of the committee, you represent the Republican voters of forty-eight states of the Union. You bear the commission of the Republican convention which met in Chicago in June. That convention colored anew our fidelity to the historic Republican party. Our purpose is to carry forward the work it has so well done since its organization and to promote the further progress of the United States. The convention adopted a platform which rings true for patriotism and constitutional government and worthily bestowed a renomination upon our present Chief Executive, Herbert Hoover.

Appreciates Distinction

You, ladies and gentlemen, notify me that the convention named me as the party's candidate for Vice President. Our party has but once before conferred a renomination for the office upon a Vice President, and this distinction is appreciated and its value is augmented by the generous words in which you, Senator Dickinson, announce it. I assure you it gives me pleasure to accept. As a loyal Republican, a disciple of the party of Abraham Lincoln, I stand upon the party platform, approve of Mr. Hoover's admirable statement of Republican principles and the achievements contained in his address accepting the renomination for President.

The Republican party has never claimed to possess within its membership a monopoly on patriotism and virtue. Just as in the period of the World War we Republicans put patriotism and loyalty to our country above party politics, so in the present economic crisis I was pleased indeed to witness in the last session that our friends on the other side of the aisle put patriotism above politics and supported many of the recommendations of our President, Herbert Hoover.

Upon three different occasions since I have been in public life and when very serious situations existed I have seen both sides of the aisle stand by the President regardless of party lines. The first was in 1898; the second during the World War; and the third during the last two and one-half years.

Protection

We should not only retain our home market, but we should build it up and increase it as much as possible. This is necessary not only to give American labor employment but also to procure for agriculture a just reward for its labor. If the farmer cannot sell, he cannot buy. Likewise if American laborers are unemployed they cannot buy and when these two are unable to buy there is a decline in the demand for American-made goods and for American products.

The extent to which the wage earners of the country can purchase depends upon the extent of their employment and the amount of wages earned by them. There must be an ability to buy whatever may be the price, high or low, at which the thing desired is sold. So the two great problems which we must solve are to secure employment for the unemployed and to make a market for the products of the farm and factory. The application of the principles of the American system of protection is necessary in order to keep out of our country goods which come into competition with our home-made goods and home-grown products.

We produce a surplus of many products and articles in this country which the markets of other countries must seek and have. These articles should be handled in a way which would give our producers the command of the market where such articles are needed.

It was the great protectionist, our martyred President, William McKinley, who in his last great speech recommended the adoption of a system which would provide a mutual exchange of commodities. He said "a mutual exchange is manifestly essential to the continued and healthful growth of our export trade. We must not repose in fancied security that we can forever sell everything and buy little or nothing. We should take from our customers such of their products as we can use without harm to our industries and labor. Especially is the national outgrowth of our wonderful industrial development under the domestic policy now firmly established. What we produce beyond our domestic consumption must have a sale abroad. The excess must be relieved through a foreign outlet and we should sell everything we can, and buy wherever the buying will enlarge our sales and products and thereby make a greater demand for home labor."

Since President McKinley made this statement with respect to export trade, the sales of American merchandise abroad have experienced a great expansion. During the past two years, to be sure, they have suffered a temporary but severe decline as a result of the world depression. Yet in 1931 our exports were still valued at the tremendous sum of $2,434,000,000, compared with only $1,370,000,000 in 1900.

In certain of intervening years our American export business reached total values that have never been approached by any other nation. This was, in part at least, a direct consequence of our vigorous governmental policy of trade promotion. We have representatives of our Department of Commerce in every important market center of the world. Energetic, consistent and fruitful are words that may truly be applied to the foreign trade promotional activities of the American government in recent years.

Immigration

The fear of a deluge of immigrants from war-stricken Europe resulted in the passage on May 20, 1924, of a drastic restrictive immigration law. The wisdom of this policy of protecting American workingmen by the rigid restriction of immigration cannot be doubted. The result of the enactment of the law in 1924 has been beneficial to the working men of the United States beneficial to those foreign born as well as to those born in this country. The number of immigrants admitted to the United States from all countries in 1924 was 1,218,480 while only 303,338 departed. In 1928 after the law had been amended the number admitted dropped to 290,297 and 77,599 departed. In 1931 when the law was rigidly enforced only 43,353 were admitted while 33,186 departed, of which departures 18,868 were by deportation. The reports show that during this present year more have departed than have been admitted. The intelligent devotion to the task of Americanization given by the Daughters of the American Revolution and other patriotic societies in their dealings with the foreign born who came to this country in good faith; the rigid enforcement of the immigration law; and the deportation of alien criminals, racketeers and other undesirable have been helpful to all our people.

Having briefly covered the tariff and the immigration questions separately, I desire now to consider them jointly. Periods of economic depression and after-war world wide readjustment exist as every nation is now going through, apply the acid test to party policies, administrative acts and legislative enactments. In these trying times of world wide economic disturbances Republican tariffs and immigration restrictions account largely for American wages being more than in any other country. Not only are our wages higher than in any other land, but American standards of living are far higher, hours of labor shorter and working conditions better than in any other nation.

The object of a tariff is to benefit and protect our workingmen from the lower wages, longer hours and lower standards of living of other countries and to protect our manufacturers and American producers in every industry and insure them our markets. The Republican party by its twin tariff and immigration restriction planks recognizes that our first duty is to our own and those already here, native or foreign born alike.

It is indeed fortunate that in these times of world wide liquidation, stagnation and readjustment there were on the federal statute books tariff and immigration laws placed there by Republican administrations, and that there was in the White House a President who sensed the situation at its very start, with real statesmanship and administrative foresight and a keen regard for the workers and the people, two years ago adopted a policy intended to prevent any more job hunters starting for the United States. This action has done more good than any other thing could have done to avert more increased unemployment, more human misery and more human suffering.

Agriculture
Because of the desire of the Republican party to aid and assist the farmers of our country I think it important to refer briefly to some of the departmental and congressional efforts to relieve some of the adverse conditions affecting the farmers.
The farmers and stockmen of Kansas remember quite well their troubles began after the great World War. In the fall of 1919 when the deflation policy of the Federal Reserve System was inaugurated. At the time I was attending a meeting at Eureka, Kansas, when I was called upon by a number of farmers and stockmen who informed me that they had been notified they must take up their obligations which were soon to become due. This would force them not only to flood the markets with cattle and hogs but to do so even before the animals were ready for the market. Of course it meant ruin to these men. I made a trip was soon joined by a committee of 28 farmers and stockmen but we were unable to get relief.

This was followed by the importation from other countries of a flood of agricultural products in 1920. The importation of such products in that year amounted to in round numbers, three billion dollars. This was disastrous to the American farmer and resulted in the demand for and the enactment of the emergency tariff act of 1921 to protect farm products. This act and the regular act that followed resulted in a drop of over one billion dollars in the importation of agricultural products the first year it was in operation.

The Congress has been trying to solve the farm problem for the last eleven years, and in that time between twenty-five and thirty bills have been enacted into law, with the hope and expectation that they would give agriculture the greatly needed and deserved relief. But I regret to say that while some of them have helped to some extent yet most of them have not come up to the expectation of those who introduced and supported them. While this problem has not been and should not be partisan yet the Republican party wishes to solve it and is anxious to bring the farmer into a situation of equality with industry. One of the problems is to reduce the spread between the producer on the farm receives and the ultimate consumer pays for such products. Another is to provide the farmers better marketing facilities. I have for years believed a national cooperative system would help solve the problem and I still believe such a system properly organized and conducted would enable the farmer to get a better price for his products and at the same time do no injury to those who deal honestly in the buying and selling and selling of farm products, while protecting the farmer against those who will not give him a square deal.

Not Been Neglected

Our party can not be charged with having neglected the question because since March 4, 1921, it has enacted into law various measures intended to solve the problem. These acts were not only supported by the various farm organizations but many of them were proposed by such organizations. This is evidenced by the report of the American Farm Bureau Federation of April 6, 1923, from which I quote the following:

"The passing of the Sixty-Seventh Congress into history marks an epoch in the undertaking of the American Farm Bureau's national legislative campaign.
"It is not too much to say that the twenty-six laws passed by that Congress, which were initiated or supported by us, are of far more importance to American agriculture than all the legislation relating to agriculture passed since the adoption of our Constitution."

Since then a tariff act has been passed which materially increased the duty on the products of the farm. The 1930 tariff act increased the rates on agricultural products by thirty per cent and on industrial products only twelve per cent.

Since its enactment world conditions have been such that its main benefit has been to shut out products of agriculture coming from other countries but the condition of the consumers in our own country has been such that there has been a greatly depressed home market. This condition at home will be cured when our own people have a greater purchasing power, which can only be brought about when our working men are employed at a reasonable wage.

I was privileged to introduce two measures to relieve the agricultural situation. One was to provide for a national cooperative marketing organization. It gave the farmers complete control of the organization. It made provision for the farmers to be informed as to supply and demand. It enabled the producers through their organization to hold their non-perishable products in case of an over supply in the market centers. There was no handling, either buying or selling, of farm products by the government.

Pronounced Sound

This measure was pronounced sound by many of the leading friends and supporters of the farmers in Congress and it was unanimously reported from the Committee on Agriculture of the Senate on June 6, 1924. It was claimed that it would take time to work out its provisions and that emergency legislation was needed so this measure introduced by me was not acted upon by the Congress. The other measure which I introduced was one of the 26 that received favorable consideration. It made provision for the government to invest fifty million dollars to help the Federal Land Banks to meet the applications of the farmers for loans. One of the members of the board expressed his approval of the following terms:

"I can hardly conceive of anything that you might have done is going to have such far-reaching and lasting beneficial effect upon the agricultural situation now and in the future."

In this last Congress further relief was given to the Farm Loan Bank.
In addition to the legislative enactments of a general nature the Republican administration has sponsored special relief measures for conditions brought about by floods, droughts, the fruit fly and grasshopper plague.

The Republican party has always considered that the various industries of our country were entitled to equal and fair consideration at the hands of the Congress and the national administration.

I have always had the greatest confidence in the fairness of the American people and I know the reason for the people criticizing the party under whose policies great and important questions have been solved and which is anxious to settle all questions in the best interest of all our people, and under whose policies our nation has become the greatest and most powerful in the world.

The President has given special attention to the machinery of government and has asked Congress to authorize him to consolidate the governmental agencies with a view of increasing efficiency and reducing the cost of administration. For years there has been a continuous expansion of governmental functions in every direction, and a necessary increase in expenditures. There should be a systematic investigation and reorganization of governmental agencies with a view to eliminating duplications and of uniting bureaus when union is possible without impairing the efficiency of the departments. Four years ago I advocated the abolition of all unnecessary boards and commissions and the consolidation of bureaus. I was encouraged to do this because of the savings brought about by the movement started by me, some twenty years ago, to authorize the President to consolidate the ports of entry. This was authorized and $300,000 a year has been saved every year, since the order of consolidation was signed on March 4, 1913, by President Taft. Since then a few other consolidations have been brought about and every one has resulted in a saving in expenditures. It is pleasing to note that the President has been authorized to a limited extent to make consolidations and it is believed that the result will be beneficial and the savings will be worth while, and what changes may be made that will result in a reduction of taxes in place of increasing them. Expenses of government should be reduced wherever and whenever it is possible to do so. A policy should be adopted that will bring our governmental expenses within its income.

Women in the Task of Government and Their Recognition by the Republicans

No evolution in human history is more important than the expansion of the powers and privileges of modern women. The women of our country have made a great fight and accomplished much in their contest for legal, educational, occupational and political freedom and it was not until our own generation that equality with men before the law was extended to the women.

It was a pleasure to me to take a nearly stand for woman suffrage and to assist those who came to Washington in their efforts to secure the submission of the 19th amendment granting nation-wide suffrage to their sex. I have always supported legislation beneficial to the women of the country.

It has been gratifying to note the important part they have taken in the management and control of the country's affairs; and the efforts they have made to enforce recognition of, and improvement in, their own particular problems. The women of this country have done their full part in assisting in the task of good government and they have been of great help in advancing and supporting questions of vital concern to every citizen of our country.

The Republican party has welcomed and encouraged them in their efforts in every way and it believes in, and practices, the principles of full equality between men and women. It has taken this position because women have borne their full share of responsibility in government.

Labor

It can be safely said that never in the history of labor movements, anywhere, have such distinct gains been made toward the realization of labor's laudable aims as have been made in our own country.

The hours of labor have been reduced generally from ten and twelve to eight. Inventions, improved machinery, and changed conditions have caused a new goal of forty hours a week to be set by labor and in my mind it will be reached before long. The five day week should and will come.

The rise of organized labor is the story of muscle and brawn united with intelligence—labor in fighting for its rights meets intelligence with intelligence; reason with reason; and facts with facts.

The strikes of the past have largely disappeared and in their place has come the ever-increasing recognition of the wisdom of arbitration and co-operation. Today it is gratifying to note that the workers and the employers realize that they are complimentary to and dependent upon each other; and that if either is to prosper they must be allies, not enemies.

We all desire to see labor fully employed at good wages, for this means an increase in the purchasing power of the country which is so much needed at this time by the producers on the farms and in the factories of our land.

Money in Circulation

The present administration has taken active steps to put hoarded and idle money in circulation; in other words to put it to work in industry so as to give labor employment and to add to the purchasing power of our people.

The records show that it has been successful in its efforts. When the crash came in October, 1929, there was $40.23 per capita in circulation; the amount decreased to $36.30 in October, 1930. Since then the amount in circulation has increased and on June 30, 1932, the amount per capita in circulation was $45.50.

The Constitution

It seems to me that the statement on the Constitution and the manner of its amendment by the great statesman, the bicentennial of whose birth all the people of our country are celebrating this year, George Washington, might with propriety be repeated today. He said:

"This government, the offspring of our own choice, uninfluenced and unaided, adopted upon full investigation and mature deliberation, completely free in its principles, in the distribution of its powers, uniting security with energy, and containing within itself a provision for its own amendment, has a just claim to your confidence and your support. Respect for its authority, compliance with its laws, acquiescence in its measures, are duties enjoined by the fundamental maxims of true liberty. The basis of our political systems is the right of the people to make and alter their constitutions of government. But the Constitution which at any time exists, until changes by an explicit and authentic act of the whole people, is sacredly obligatory upon all."

The Republican platform recognizes the fact that the people should have full opportunity for the expression of their will on the question of amending the Constitution and makes no distinction as to the Republicanism of the members of the party because of their stand on the prohibition question. It clearly points out that the Constitution provides the manner in which amendments to it may be made and if changes are desired in it, they should be made

How Irish Strike at British Tariff

While British statesmen labored at Ottawa to improve trade relations within the empire, this discordant note was struck in Ireland. The banner, shown stretched across a street in Loughree, County Galway, urges the Irish to boycott British goods as a protest against the recent impositions of a tariff on Irish imports.

in the way the Constitution designates.

While the people may differ as to the wisdom of the enactment of a particular piece of legislation, or as to the amending of the Constitution, it is impossible to ignore the Constitution.

The Republican party pledges itself to the faithful enforcement of the Constitution and the vigorous execution of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution and to oppose the return of the saloon.

I believe in meeting the issue squarely; I am not only in favor of honestly and fearlessly enforcing all our laws but further I am opposed to the return of the saloon and I am opposed to the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Loyalty to the Common Good

Today there is in this country a loyalty to the common good among our people which will go forth to rout economic peril which hangs over us. It is not confined to one sect or one creed, it is universal. We have gone through many such periods, since the organization of the Republic, but further I am opposed to the return of the saloon and I am opposed to the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

When we read of the depressions of the past which have given our people so much concern and read how little was done to check them by the national administrations then in power, and then recall that has been done by the present administration to bring relief we are justly proud of what has been done and we feel sure that in time such efforts are bound to succeed.

President Active

At the outset of the depression

the President called a conference of the leaders in every walk of life in this country. He formulated a building program which included the erection of public buildings and works, the construction of highways, the improvement of rivers and harbors, etc. This provided employment for a large number of American laborers; it created a market for material and caused the expenditure of millions of dollars.

Upon his recommendation the Congress enacted a number of measures intended to bring relief to our people, among which was the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. By the way, there is quite a wrong impression in regard to the loans made by the organization. While it is true that it has helped some of the larger banks, yet of the 3600 banks and trust companies assisted by it 70 percent of the relief has gone to banks and trust companies in cities of less than 5,000 population, 78 per cent in those of less than 10,000 and 86 per cent in those of less than 25,000 population. The Glass-Steagall measure, the tax bill, the economy measure and others have been enacted into law. I know the hearty co-operation of members of both political parties in the enactment of relief measures recommended by the President is deeply appreciated by the people. The President has so fully covered the economy and relief legislation that it is unnecessary for me to go into those subjects. We all know our country has a bright future; that when this business depression is over we will go forward as we have after every period of depression. Never before have the people in our country worked so hard, done so much planning and given as much thought and consideration to existing conditions with the view of making things better.

This is as it should be because we are all more deeply concerned in the situation in our own country than we are in any other, though we wish other countries well and hope they will soon recover from their troubles and their depressions. We realize that this is a world-wide depression and know that anything to improve conditions in other parts of the world will help our own countries. We are, therefore, ready to help other countries in every way possible provided we are not drawn into their political quarrels, and this has been shown on many occasions. But this does not mean a cancellation of our foreign debts. Personally I am opposed to cancellation and I know the sentiment of a large majority of the members of the House and Senate is the same on that question. We are first anxious about our own depression, our own unemployment and our own troubles and these we shall solve by a continued united effort of our own farmers, our own business men, our own laboring men and our own financial and industrial leaders.

Faith in Future

I have great faith in the future of our wonderful country because there never were greater men and greater women than those we have today and we shall change the present times into prosperity because of the efforts of these men and women who are working together and doing so much for our beloved country. In my opinion there ought to be established in society such an order of things that everywhere the aged and dependent may have a place of refuge and the poor employment and food. We were the last great country to feel the cold hard grip of depression and I feel sure we will be the first to recover. May that time come soon is the prayer of our people.—Herbert Hoover.

IT'S NO JOKE

Jacksonville, Fla. — D. W. (Jack) Perfit has learned that not everybody can take a joke. Especially gentlemen of the press. After being defeated in the primaries recently, Parfit, clerk of the civil and criminal courts of record, told a reporter he was planning a party for defeated candidates their families and friends. The reporter, taking it all in, put the story in his paper. Later, desperate at the resentment of candidates who showed up to find there was no party, he got the reporter to publish the fact that it was all in clean fun.

4-H CLUBS SHOW WORK AT AMBOY PARK TOMORROW

Farm Bureau Picnic To Be Held In Connec- tion With Exhibits

The program of races at the Amboy track was called off yesterday afternoon following a meeting of the officers and horsemen, when it was decided that the condition of the track, following the heavy rain of the night before, would not warrant the attempt to carry out the proposed card. This would give three harness events and a half-mile running race for the entertainment of racing fans.

Tomorrow, Friday will be the annual 4-H club show and Lee County Farm Bureau picnic at the fair grounds. Through yesterday and continuing today, boy and girl exhibitors from all sections of the county were bringing their projects to the fair grounds and entering them in the various divisions. ASSET 990,000 DIED IN FLIGHT OF "WHITE"
ARMY

If there ever was a genuine reproduction of hell on earth, it must have been in Russia and Siberia during the two or three years immediately following the Russian revolution.

"Between White and Red," by Erich Dwinger, tells of the things that happened there while the various "white" armies were trying to overthrow the Bolsheviks, and there is enough horror and human suffering in his pages to leave you heart sick.

Dwinger was a German soldier, captured by the Russians early in the war. Escaping from prison after the revolution, he joined the "white" army of Admiral Kolitchak in a vain attempt to get back home. "Between White and Red" tells what he saw.

He shows us an army of half a million men, accompanied by half a million civilian refugees, retreating across Siberia in midwinter under conditions so frightful that a scant 10,000 lived to reach their goal; he shows us battles in which all prisoners were executed, in which all captured officers were tortured to death; he shows us starvation, sickness, pain, weariness and despair as the common lot of millions of people for months at a time, and he voices, too, a bit of criticism of the Allies for the half-hearted support of Kolitchak.

MUCH DEPENDS ON HEALTH OF MR. MacDONALD

Prime Minister's Stamina Big Factor In Empire Affairs

London — (AP) — Ramsey MacDonald's health looms large in interesting current speculation concerning Britain's political future.

It is not too far-fetched to say that the whole trend of the empire's political life may depend on two comparatively minor matters — Ramsey MacDonald's eyesight and his nervous system.

Will he serve his full term as prime minister, which, unless an unlikely parliamentary upset occurs, should be approximately four years more?

May Become Peer
Or will this apparently stalwart rugged Scot succumb to exhaustion and move to gentler spheres, for instance, the House of Lords, or the viceregal palace at New Delhi?

Indeed, it is being asked whether he will even face the next session of parliament at his logical post as chief target for opposition arrows. His health may cause him to relinquish that embattled seat, which so evidently irks him, to the more phlegmatic attention of Stanley Baldwin.

Just that happened last winter. It was Baldwin who steered the tariff bill and other controversial matters through parliament, rolling nicely with the opposition punches, a trick which MacDonald has never acquired.

MacDonald, as soon as parliament opened last February, retired to a nursing home for an operation for glaucoma on his left eye. Not long ago, shortly after returning from Geneva, his right eye was operated on.

As soon as possible he went to Lausanne, and coming back, took a long rest in his native Loozsemouth. Early in August he was back in London. His intimates said he ever looked fitter. But MacDonald's appearance and the facts about his physical condition seldom harmonize.

Ramsey MacDonald is essentially a nervous type. In conversation his fingers drum the desk, his foot taps the floor. His eyes are restive seeking relief from the boredom of listening when his quick mind has already put him two jumps ahead of the argument.

MacDonald had his first serious illness when he was visiting privately in the United States, not long after the war. He lay several weeks in a Philadelphia hospital. Physicians were puzzled by his ailment, which so considered almost purely psychological.

Rumors of Breakdown
Then in December, 1927, it was reported again that MacDonald's health was causing anxiety. It was rumored that he would be forced to take a long holiday.

So it has been since then.

Alarming rumors have been frequent. MacDonald was "breaking down." Actually he never did. That grim will of his kept him going until a purely functional affection of the eyes, caused by strain, caught up with him last winter.

The duties of a prime minister these days are far from the leisurely, dignified, comfortable ones of the not-so-distant past. Paper work alone is appalling.

Within the last few years, indeed, a British prime minister has needed to be not only an astute politician, but a sociologist, an economist, an industrialist, and a banker all in one. And, if possible, a good orator.

caused by too much carbohydrate residue in the colon. This is particularly liable to be the case in roughage diets consumed in the treatment of constipation.

One ounce of cellulose, the woody pulp material that forms a large part of our vegetables and fruits, when entirely fermented in the body's process, will produce approximately 2 1-2 gallons of gas.

Foul gas usually points to protein decomposition. It is believed that the absorption of such gas may produce the symptoms associated with intestinal intoxication, namely, lassitude, headache and insomnia.

It is certain too, that foul breath may arise out of the absorption of the gases produced in protein decomposition.

The treatment of flatulence includes improvement in abdominal circulation by exercise and massage, the elimination from the diet of indigestible, irritating substances of such cellulose-rich foods as oatmeal, coarse vegetables, beans and peas.

Daily Health Talk

FLATULENCE
Flatulence, or gas in the bowels, is an annoying condition and one that not infrequently alarms the sufferer, because it may give rise to pains simulating disease in various parts of the body.

Intestinal gas, unlike gas in the stomach, is almost entirely produced within the bowels themselves.

It is a result of fermentation usually taking place in the colon, though at times it may be caused by a putrefactive decomposition of proteins in the small intestines.

It should be realized that the production of gas is a normal incident to the digestive process. Ordinarily, however, most of this gas is absorbed and does not give rise to any untoward symptoms.

DANGER SIGNS WAVING BEFORE GRIMM'S CUBS

National League Race Promises To Become Hotter At Finish

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sport Writer
It is hard to imagine a pennant race any warmer than the current National League affair, in which the last place team is only 15 games behind the first and three teams are battling for the lead within a space of 1-2 games, but there are various signs and portents that it will become even more heated before the season ends.

Despite a record of 15 defeats in their last 17 games, many of them chargeable to left-handed pitching, the Pittsburgh Pirates were only two games behind the league-leading Chicago Cubs today with the charging Brooklyn Dodgers another half game back. And Pittsburgh was threatening to stage a comeback any moment while the danger signals were flying for the Cubs.

Season's Longest Game

It took just about everything the Cubs had yesterday to turn back the Boston Braves, now holders of sixth place. They waged the longest battle of the major league campaign, 19 innings before Chicago finally won out 3 to 2. Bud Tinning and Frank Frankhouse waged the major part of the struggle and the latter finally lost out when a single, a hit batsman and an intentional pass crowded the corners and young Frank Demaree connected with one of the first offerings of Hub Pruett, successor to Frankhouse, for a long fly that brought in Bill Herman with the winning run.

Although Brooklyn closed the gap between second and third to a game, with a 4-1 victory over Pittsburgh, the Bucs showed plenty of fight. A three run rally off Bill Swift in the eighth won the game, but Pittsburgh came back as soon as it was quelled and drove Freddy Heimach to cover. Van Mungo checked the threat with the bases full.

Mooney Holds Reds
In the third National League game, Bill Terry of the New York Giants clouted a homer, two doubles and two singles while Jim Mooney was holding Cincinnati to four hits and Giants won easily, 8 to 0. Rain halted the Phillies and Cards.

To emphasize the difference between the American League chase and the National, the New York Yankees, leaders of the junior circuit, won their tenth straight game, defeating Detroit 8 to 3, on a strong combination of steady pitching by George Pipgras and effective hitting by Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig. The Babe made three hits, including his 34th homer while Lou batted in three counts.

The triumph increased the Yanks' lead to 11-2 games as the Philadelphia Athletics regained second place from Cleveland with a 11-0 triumph over the Indians. Lefty Grove's four-hit hurling brought him his 18th victory and his fourth shutout.

Washington, in fourth place but far out of the picture, turned back the Chicago White Sox, 4 to 2, with a seventh inning rally that netted three runs off Ted Lyons. A six-hit mound performance by Paul Andrews and three blows apiece by Dale Alexander and Smedley Jolley netted the Boston Red Sox a 7 to 3 triumph over the St. Louis Browns in the remaining contest.

Referee Tries To Explain Decision

Newark, N. J., Aug. 18 — (AP)—The decision which gave Stanley Poreda of Jersey City a victory over Primo Carnera in their fight here Tuesday night has aroused a tempest of no mean proportions in New Jersey boxing circles.

It seems that so few spectators saw eye to eye with Referee Joe Marzold of Atlantic City, who awarded the decision to Poreda, that George E. Keenen, New Jersey's Boxing Commissioner, ordered the suspension of the official until all the whys and wherefores could be investigated.

"Poreda," the referee said, "was the winner because he was the aggressor, landed the most and clearest punches and was in better shape at the finish. On the other hand, Carnera was continually guilty of foul tactics such as heeling, pushing and shoving. For this reason Carnera had points scored against him."

SHOUSE LEADS DRIVE AGAINST DRY AMENDMENT

Elected President Of Association Fight- ing Dry Statute

Washington, Aug. 18 — (AP) — Joutett Shouse has been selected by the Association against the Prohibition Amendment to lead what the chairman of its executive committee calls a drive "to bring about promptly the ratification of the new amendment which Congress will submit."

Pierre S. Du Pont, the chairman, announced Shouse's appointment as president in a letter to directors of the association. Shouse, recently chairman of the Democratic National Executive Committee, succeeds Henry H. Curran, who will become vice chairman of the directors of the association.

DuPont said that because of a "marked change in public sentiment" the association must do a "somewhat different character of work."

That, he said, will be to try "to draw together all of those who feel that the eighteenth amendment does not belong in the Constitution and that the only wise solution for the vexed liquor problem is to return control to the states without attempting such restrictions, no matter how desirable their purpose, as to introduce new complications into the situation."

Shouse said in a statement that affairs of the association in the last several years had been handled "with intelligence, discretion and skill" but that "a constructive opportunity of large possibilities now awaits it." Curran, in another statement, welcomed Shouse to the association.

Hooks and Slides

By WILLIAM BRAUCHER

The complaint uttered by Ralph Metcalfe of Marquette, that he did not get a fair shake in the Olympic 200 meters which was won by Eddie Tolan, appears to be well justified in view of the picture of the start of the race as recorded by the camera.

The contestants in the 200-meters ran in lanes. Since the course led around a turn, it was necessary to measure off some space between each starter, the man on the outside lane being several yards ahead of the man with the rail position. This was supposed to make each contestant run the same distance.

Metcalfe declares his starting mark was at least four feet behind the point from which he should have been allowed to start. He was in Lane 2, next to Tolan, who had the rail. The camera's vision of the start supports his claim. But what are you going to do about it?

One way to become ill is to take over the job of handling the Boston Red Sox. Bill Carrigan wilted under the strain. Heinie Wagner worried himself into a hospital, Shauno Collins, after a year on a half in the same business, became so ill he could not go to the ball park.

The other day a physician was summoned to the clubhouse, to minister to Marty McManus, who succeeded Shauno. Marty was a well man when he took over the task about a month ago, but has been near nervous collapse for the last two weeks.

SPEAKING RIGHT UP—

Wilbur Coen takes pen in hand to explain the position of the 13 players who left the Seabright tennis tournament flat on its back. Writing in an issue of American Lawn Tennis, Wilbur says:

"We feel that the Seabright club looks and talks down to the players. They admit this when they say that the ideal practice of having players as the guests of families in their homes cannot be continued owing to abuses perpetrated by these players."

"To me this is on the borderline of insulting and prompts me to put the question to the club. 'Why do you ask these men back if they do not act as gentlemen?' 'We are all condemned for the actions of a few. One of the officials remarked to me that certain players have to be put up in hotels where they can do no harm. What an odd situation!'

"Players invited to Seabright receive a folder itemizing a long list of incidents which the club mentions only to avoid any misunderstandings."

ABOUT EXPENSES—

"Now, amateurs, and there are some playing the American tournaments, resent this folder. I have never accepted incidental expenses."

as and never will, but the club which invites me does not need to make a written statement about it."

Coen also criticized the club's action last year in forcing the men to play two rounds on one day, which "the players felt was to reduce the expenses of the remaining entrants to a minimum."

He offers a good word for the west. "If hospitality is overdone in the west," Coen writes, "it at least makes one feel at home. The real issue at Seabright was the relationship set up between the club and the players."

The presenters' side of the argument very well, it seems to me. But it leaves me wondering who are the 'certain players' who have to be put up in hotels where they can do no harm!"

SIDE GLANCES

"All of the employees have agreed to the cut except a Miss Perkins, of the handkerchief counter in our Des Moines store."

THIS CURIOUS WORLD

FIVE MUSKRATS
 WERE TAKEN TO PRAGUE, BOHEMIA, IN 1905... AND THEIR OFFSPRING HAVE SPREAD INTO UPPER AND LOWER AUSTRIA, BAVARIA, AND GERMANY — AND NUMBER ABOUT 100 MILLION!

A GRAPE,
 WHEN PLACED IN A GLASS OF SODA WATER, SINKS TO THE BOTTOM. AIR BUBBLES SOON COLLECT ON IT AND BRING IT TO THE SURFACE AGAIN. WHEN A FEW OF THE BUBBLES BURST, THE GRAPE ONCE MORE SINKS. THE PROCESS WILL REPEAT ITSELF UNTIL THE SODA WATER IS "DEAD."

It is one of the curious things of nature that when an animal is introduced into a strange country, it generally does one of two things — flourishes beyond all expectations, or dies off in short order. The muskrat, the house sparrow, the cabbage butterfly, and the clothes moth are examples of immigrants that have "made good" in lands far from their native habitat. The muskrats are causing plenty of worry for the fish culturists of Central Europe by destroying the dams which form the fish ponds.

MONA MORAN, receptionist in a Wall Street law office, receives an amusing proposal of marriage. Her employer tells her a wealthy client wishes to marry her immediately with the understanding that for a year she shall occupy her own apartment, have unlimited charge accounts, do as she pleases. At the end of that time she is to decide whether to become the man's wife in actuality or secure a divorce.

Mona is in love with BARRY FOWNSHEND, rich and socially prominent, who is the business partner of her old friend, STEVE SAFFERHILL. Barry, who operates a diamond mine in South America, Steve, born to poverty, has recently sold a huge diamond called "The Empress of Peru."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXVI

SPRING turned to summer. Mona, after a week at the Ritz with Lottie, moved into the newly decorated suite of the Townsend house on 63rd street. Dad left the hospital and returned to the Third avenue flat. Finally as June ended Mona packed her father, mother and Kitty off to Atlantic City.

In July she and Lottie set off to Maine for a vacation. "It will be dull," Mona warned. "Remember I have the Townsend dignity to uphold. No flirtations, no gay parties. Not even dancing!"

"I'm not so interested in parties," Lottie confessed. In a lower tone she touched upon a forbidden subject. "Have you heard from the boys?"

It was early evening and they were in Mona's sitting room. Lottie, lovely and ingenious looking as always, was seated on a chaise longue. Mona, in a fragile white gown and wearing Steve's diamonds, moved about aimlessly, considering what baggage to take on the trip.

"Mother hears from Bud. He's well and says the others are. You know a boy's letters!" Mona sighed.

"Where's the safe?"

"The new machinery is installed and the mine is booming."

Mona was not yet accustomed to having a maid wait on her. She was busily looking over lingerie, smoothing gloves, examining hose. Lottie watched silently, knowing it was useless to remind her friend that the maid could do all this tomorrow in a trice.

After a while Lottie said, "Has Mr. Townsend shown you the Townsend jewels yet?"

Mona looked up from the stocking box. Her hand strayed to the diamond chain about her throat. "I have these but of course they're not Townsend jewels. I have my emerald. Mrs. Faxon says she selected an emerald necklace for my birth day but he's saving it for me until the opera opens. She says he wants to see me go down the aisle in a black velvet gown and emeralds."

"Don't get scared! Don't get scared!" he said. "I ain't here to hurt anybody. I'm here to get the Townsend jewels."

His tone was almost friendly. "And don't try ringing for a servant, either," he advised, taking a step nearer. "Nobody will answer. They're all out." The young man was entirely at his ease. Inviting Mona to be seated, he took an easy chair.

"If you know so much about the household," Mona began, "then you know I haven't any jewels to speak of. You know—"

He grinned broadly. "Give me the ones you don't talk about then." He removed a silver cigarette case from his pocket and flipped it open. "Smoke?"

The girls declined. The stranger selected a cigarette, lighted it and puffed as if he were there for the evening.

But he was in rather more of a hurry than had at first appeared. "Now then," he said briskly, "where's the safe?"

"Just exactly eight fillin' stations north on this street," said Lottie. "But when some stranger asked where the Baptist church was, Easy street is gittin' t' be a purty shady thoroughfare."

Mona Palmer said probably the most outstanding part of the manufacturing process will be the use of more than 500,000 sheets of 22-carat gold for the stamping on the cloth-bound edition and gliding edges and stamping the de luxe edition. Mr. Palmer estimated the cost of the gold alone at $12,500.

Christian Science Hymnal Contract Keeps Plant Busy

(From Kingsport (Tenn.) Times) The Kingsport Press, Incorporated, has received the largest known single order of hymnals ever placed with a single concern. The order was placed by The Christian Science Publishing Society of Boston.

The order consists 400,000 cloth-bound books and 10,000 de luxe full leather-bound books. The books will be distributed throughout the world. It is expected the distribution will begin about Sept. 1.

The music plates for the 640-page hymnal were prepared by the F. H. Gilson Company of Boston, nationally known music composers. All of the type for the plates was set by hand.

E. W. Palmer, president of the local plant, said some idea of the magnitude of the order could be obtained by the quantity of material and time necessary for the completion of the book. Five of the largest perfecting presses of the Kingsport Press began work on printing the book June 15 and will run 20 hours each day until Aug. 25, at which time the printing is expected to be complete.

A total of 325 tons of paper will be used in the book, 40,240 yards of book cloth, 39,000 yards of head

Sidelights In News In Capital Of United States

By HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington—Politicians and political observers may scratch their heads and blink in surprise at the remarkable victory of Mrs. Caraway of Arkansas in her race for the Senate, but to at least one person the election of "the little woman from Arkansas," as Huey Long calls her, must be truly amazing.

She is Ruth Hanna McCormick, now Mrs. Albert Sims of New Mexico, who made such a desperate but futile bid a few years ago for a Senate seat herself.

Mrs. McCormick spent a large sum in the effort to realize her ambition of being the first woman ever elected to the Senate. Mrs. Caraway, by comparison spent hardly nothing. She is a poor woman, dependent largely on the salary she receives as Senator for support.

But then Mrs. McCormick didn't have Huey Long and his political circus to help her campaign. It looks as if the "kingfishing" of Huey aided much in putting Mrs. Caraway over.

A FULL FLEDGED SENATOR— Capitol hill will watch with interest the development of Mrs. Caraway as a full-fledged Senator in the future. There can be no doubt but what she is that now. She has been through the rough and tumble of campaigning just as any of those gentlemen who sit with her in the Senate.

She will no longer be regarded as a mere senatorial widow as she so designated herself at present. Her biography in the Directory will note that she is filling the "vacancy" caused by the death of her husband, Thaddeus H. Caraway.

HER OPPORTUNITY—

From now on her place in the Senate will have a different meaning. Thus far she hasn't opened her mouth in that body except to answer when her name is called.

But she can hardly fail to realize the significance of her accomplishment in capturing in her own right a seat in the Senate. She has lived too intimately with politics for that during the years that her husband fought his way up.

She knows well that an opportunity has come to her which will be heralded hereafter as a milestone in the feminist movement. And she will make the most of it.

They Escaped Comrades' Fate in Submarine Disaster

Their faces sober with the realization of the tragic fate which they narrowly escaped, the only survivors among the officers and crew of the sunken French submarine Promethee are shown here during memorial services held in honor of their 63 comrades who met death in the disaster. High government officials looked on as a benediction was pronounced and flowers were strewn over the spot, off Cherbourg, where the submarine foundered.

They'll Ease the Plight of the Home-Owner

Their problem one of easing the financial worries of home owners, the directors of the new Home Loan Bank Board are pictured above as they held their first meeting in Washington. Left to right are H. Morton Bodfish of Chicago; Nathan Adams of Dallas, Tex.; Franklin Fort (chairman) of New Jersey; John W. Gries of Ohio; and W. E. Best of Pittsburgh.

Miller of Houston, Texas were in a tourist cap at Springfield, Saturday morning enroute to Lee Center to spend their vacation at the A. F. Jeanblanc home. Mr. Miller was stricken with a heart attack. This proved fatal in a short time, although he was immediately taken to a hospital and given every attention. The coroner's verdict indicated either athlete's heart or apoplexy. Mr. and Mrs. Jeanblanc, son Ferdinand and Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Lawrence left for Springfield upon receipt of the message and his father also was summoned from Commerce, Texas. Mr. Miller was teacher of French and Spanish in the high schools of Houston, and formerly the athletic coach. He and Mrs. Miller, the former Edith Jeanblanc, had been married five years. This was a tragic termination to their plans for a happy reunion with friends and relatives here and sincere sympathy is extended to his young wife and his family which consists of his father, mother and one sister. His wife and father accompanied the remains to Commerce, Texas, where funeral services were held Tuesday. On his former visits here he had made many friends by his friendly social manner and high moral standards of life.

Lena Grace Miller of Armington and Dickie Pomeroy of Dixon have been visiting their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Grant Fuller. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Olmstead and family have returned to Chicago after spending their vacation here and in Rockford.
